

The FCNI Education Committee invites you to “Social Determinants of Health for FCN Practice”

Presented by: Cassandra Alexander, MAOM,BSN,RN and Naomi Myers, MA,RN

Date: Thursday, April 11, 2024

Time: 6pm to 7pm Central Time on Zoom

Nurses can benefit from understanding social justice when evaluating health disparities and inequities in their congregations and communities. Health disparities are driven by social and economic inequities and affect mortality, morbidity, life expectancy, health care expenditures, healthcare systems, and overall health status. Learning to assess and manage Social Determinants of Health (SDOH) is essential to address and oversee the health of a faith community.

Learning outcomes:

1. Identify steps Faith Community Nursing (FCN's) can take to improve health disparities.
2. List 3 actionable items to remedy health disparities, personally and systemically.

Bios: Cassandra Alexander is a content expert in faith community health. She has 20+ years of experience as a faith community nurse leader and in non-profit management. She launched/managed several community outreach programs providing comprehensive services to indigent populations.

Naomi Myers is a content expert in behavioral health/health administration and an Associate pastor. She earned a Bachelor degree in psychology and counseling, a Masters in ministry and counseling, and serves as a coordinator of health ministry, a Faith Community Nurse, and a Bible class teacher.
